

Anatolii Turilov (Moscow, Russia)

COLLECTION OF FRAGMENTS OF PARCHMENT MANUSCRIPTS IN THE UVAROV
COLLECTION IN GIM
(Dating and Attributions)

(Summary)

The attention in this study focuses on Collection No 1176-4^o in GIM (State History Museum, Moscow), containing fragments of four manuscripts which have been repeatedly described by Russian palaeographers. A new dating and localization of the fragments is provided. This first fragment of a menaion, is according to the author, a Middle-Bulgarian manuscript from the second half to the 13th c. The second is a Moldavian horologion (with Middle-Bulgarian spelling) of the late 13th or very early 14th c., while the fourth is a service menaion of the first half of the 14th c. The errors in the dating and attributions of these fragments in A. Turilov's opinion are due to the failure, traditional for Russian palaeographic science, to take into consideration the influence of the Southern Slavonic manuscripts of the 13th and 14th centuries on the formation of the graphics of the Eastern Slavonic scripts of the 15th c.